DOROTHY DIX

Can Love Be Won Back?

Dear Miss Dix: I have worked very hard trying to provide for my family and, while absorbed in doing this, have neglected to build a solid foundation of love and respect in my own home. Because I have been so busy I have not let my wife know how much I appreciate her faithfully standing by me and how hard she worked to help me make a success of my career. And the result of my neglect has been that warmth, affection and admiration that she once gave me has grown to a distant coldness.

Can you tell me how to win back the love that she once had for me and that I have lost through my carelessness?

B. E. S.
Answer: Many other middle-aged husbands besides you, brother, have suddenly woken up to the realization that in trying to give their families luxuries that have starved them for necessities. For wives and kids do not flourish and grow fat on cake. It is love and companionship that are the bread of life to them, and if they do not get them they starve.

There is nothing more ironic than that so many men are failures so hard to be good husbands. They are so busy giving their families fine cars and mink coats and expensive clothes that they have no time to give their wives and children sympathy and understanding and companionship.

Husband's Recipe
The other day a man, who had been through this bitter experience of losing the wife he loved because he used the wrong technique in trying to keep her, sent to this column the following recipe for reviving a wife's love. He says:

"To all husbands: Greetings! To begin with, if you really want your wife's love back, do something about it. Tell her how sorry you are to have caused her so much misery and ask for her forgiveness. Be a lover boy, regardless of age. Be lavish with your compliments. No woman is ever too old to be craved soft talk. Help her with whatever she is doing. Praise her cooking. Give her small gifts and think up ways of entertaining and amusing her. In a word, treat her as your Girl Friend, instead of just a wife. There is still some love left in her heart for you, or else she wouldn't live with you. I have had this same experience with a neglected wife and succeeded in winning her back, so why can't you?" THE STORY: John Henry and Sin Conover vacationing at a swank resort owned by Mr. Barselou, witness the death of a beautiful girl. Later their cottage is occupied by Faye Jordan in a "reservation mixup" and their luggage searched when it is moved. A cipher message put in Johnny's pocket by Anglin before he died is hidden in a mechanical pencil and not found by the searchers. Johnny is drugged in a gambling ranch where he goes with Faye. Sin, spying on Gayner, the hotel clerk, follows him to the cafe where Anglin died. In the office she discovers maps of the area near the resort. While she is surprised by Gayner and a bellhop named Vernon.

Gayner motioned Sin courteously toward the office. He followed her out of the office and down the wrought-iron staircase. The young bellhop threaded a path before them among the empty tables and pushed through the swinging doors into the kitchen. The hiss of hinges and their footsteps were the only noises.

"Where the car?" asked Vernon. "I'll bet we don't have any keys." "The usual place. I have keys," Gayner reassured him quietly. Before he opened the back door.

"Now Mrs. Conover, I needn't warn you that screaming or running or any commotion at all will be utterly useless. And very foolish on your part. I assure you." "They went into the alley," Sin fought to grasp her dilemma. Here was not the terror of those frozen moments by the aviary when the white-haired savage had threatened her. The men walking on either side were not strangers. They were prosaic everyday persons—the assistant manager of her hotel and the bellhop who had brought her breakfast. Surely, Vernon in his ridiculous pillbox hat and overdecorated uniform couldn't actually kill her with that gun he carried!

Sin thought hard and said, "Wait a minute." The trio stopped. Gayner eyed her inquiringly.

"Sin did her best to look tough and confidential at the same time. 'Suppose I said, 'I was to spill it to you torpedoes and not to Barselou.'"

Vernon asked, puzzled, "What's a torpedo?" Gayner said, "Yes," encouragingly.

"Well—," Sin groped for words. "If you got there first, you wouldn't have to split with the big boy." She hoped it meant more to them than it did to her.

"We certainly wouldn't," Gayner retorted. But, Mrs. Conover, can you give us the correct information?" Sin nodded emphatically. "Play along with me and we'll all wear diamonds."

Vernon said, "I'm right for once." A smile nearly encroached on his freckled features. Then he confronted the other man bitterly. "You'll probably claim you've been thinking that along."

"No," said Gayner. "You win." He prodded Sin toward the street. "I didn't think you knew anything, Mrs. Conover. Mr. Barselou was about to agree. I thought you were just a harmless housekeeper. But this puts a different light on it."

"You're going to take me to Barselou, anyway?" "Definitely. You can make your bargain with him. As you quantity put it, he's the big boy."

"But I really don't know anything," Sin cried desperately. "I was just kidding."

"Come on," said Vernon. "I'm supposed to be on duty." They urged her out into the white sunlight of Date Street. A few paces down the block, a sober black Buick sedan nuzzled the curb. The two men walked her quickly toward the car.

From behind them, a man's high-pitched voice called, "You-hoo! Mrs. Conover!"

"You don't hear him," Gayner muttered and quickened his steps. "Mrs. Conover!" Tires whirled around and Mr. Trim appeared alongside the trio, perched on a bicycle. Coming up behind him was the chunky figure of Thelma Loomis, also pedaling energetically. The Bry-Ter representative showed all his bad teeth in a waggish grin. "Ah, Mrs. Conover—you were try-tax on a person making $4000 or more could be increased from a top of $30 to $96 a year.

The expanded insurance program would cover a total of 50,000,000 persons.

Members of congress said they had no idea how far the unprecedented "home relief" program could go or what the overall cost would be.

Under this phase, the maximum payment in which the federal government would participate would be $50 a month for one person; $50 for the first additional person in a home, and $20 for each additional person. States would contribute 40 to 75 per cent of the cost, according to state wealth.

Such assistance from the federal treasury's general fund, outside the insurance program, now is limited to needy aged persons, the blind and dependent children. It now costs about $1,000,000,000 a year.

(Mr. Truman, in response to a question at his news conference last Thursday, said he never had heard of a proposal to give "home relief" to all poor people.)

Fair Enough

Counter-balancing the right to strike, the American citizen has a right not to strike or to take a strike job and break strike. This is an unpopular conduct but it is just and it calls for more courage and higher character than picketing which is mob action and a form of lynching. Refusal to strike or to take a strike job is a strike-breaker's conduct deserving public respect where the strike ignores the will of the workers and the equities of the case. In such premises the non-striker or the strike-breaker is a better citizen than the striker. He is a law-abiding citizen who always deserves police protection against violence and insults. He is a citizen who is not indulging in behavior in public by the one man or mob toward other individuals. The non-striker or strike-breaker deserves full benefit of their own government by police, sheriff, prosecutor and governor. The law-abiding citizen who is a right to shoot to kill if he is attacked or threatened by a mob in a manner to give him reasonable fear that he is in danger and the police fail to protect him. When a law-abiding citizen is forced to shoot to protect himself he should always shoot to kill because no man should shoot at another except in desperation.

Not enough pickets were killed by law-abiding citizens during the anarchy which gave birth to the C. I. O. in 1937, when the government forsook the good citizens. A few killings then would have preserved the right of the citizen to go about any lawful business unmolested or group might think of him or his business.

However, we have had two salutory killings within the last year which have been endorsed by trial juries in homicide cases. Both defendants were Negroes.

One killed his man in Waterloo, Ia., the other got his picket in National City, Ill., just across the river from St. Louis.

There are 60 into particulars, I want to recall the governor of Minnesota gave permission to encourage rioters involved in the same chain of strikes at sore spots in Minnesota. This was the chain-strike action of the packinghouse workers of the C. I. O. against plants in several western states. Goons crossed state lines many times as reinforcements rushed to this and that plant to overawe or overpower government. The attitude of the governor of Minnesota gave rioters an advantage over law-abiding strikers and set at naught the authority of government which all governors are sworn to uphold. By answer for morally, although, if any citizen had killed a picket, the citizen, not the governor, would have been charged with the crime.

Both of the shootings occurred last May.

In Waterloo, Ia., Fred Lee Roberts, age 50, a citizen of good reputation went out on strike against the Rath Packing company where he had worked for three years. He was previously worked more than 25 years in the shops of the Illinois Central railroad and thus had a record of industry. Five local white citizens of position testified as to Roberts' good character, including the sheriff and the county treasurer.

Roberts' job was killing pigs on the night shift. He is the father of 13 children, all living, nine of them at home and dependent, they owned a little over a year old. He got relief from the Salvation Army, a first and then from the county, a common phenomenon by which charities and public taxes are used to support men made idle through union action. Theoretically, unions are supposed to pay strike benefits to their strikers but the Rooseveltvelt's political auxiliaries and transferred the burden to charities and public treasuries. The employers contribute much to the public treasuries but the unions are tax exempt. Thus employers have to maintain strikers against

Little Rock, Feb. 21 — (AP)—Arkansas' high schools began maping battle plans today for cracks at the state's 1949 basketball titles. Act 1 will begin this weekend with district tournaments in the junior boys division and some girls district contests.

The Arkansas Athletic Association today was to select a site for the junior boys state meet which will be run off March 3-5.

All other tournament sites and dates for the competition have been selected.

The senior girls tournament will be played at Newport, March 17-19; Class B senior contests will be held in Sheridan, March 9-12. The Class A and Big Six girls tournament will be staged March 9-12 in Little Rock.

With the exception of the Big Six, each division will hold district elimination tournaments. Two teams from each district qualify for the state meet in each classification.

In the Big Six tourney's first round, Fort Smith will meet Little Rock and Pine Bluff will be pitted against North Little Rock. Hot Springs will play the winner of the Fort Smith-Little Rock game and the Pine Bluff-North Little Rock winner will meet El Dorado in the second round.

and legal elections.

Many leaders of the MNR went into exile in Argentina and Peru. Rodriguez's government charged yesterday that they had continued agitation for overthrowing his regime by force from those countries.

An interior ministry communique said that the plotters planned to seize electric and water works and dynamite essential government installations.

It said the country is now quiet with the administration in control. MNR leaders in Bolivia, some of them former cabinet members, refused to give any further details or say what further anti-revolutionary measures the government has taken, except that they are searching for MNR members who have gone into hiding.

them. Roberts, incidentally, owns a farm of 100 acres.

County relief was discontinued when the Rath company called on the strikers to come back to work. The union was willing to lend, give, Roberts' demands, demanding an assignment of future wages.

Roberts announced that he was going back to his job to support his family. Two Negro workers approached him and one said: "If you do, I have a club that I will use to beat your head to jelly." The other said that if the first one didn't do a good job he would finish it.

Roberts killed his man, William (Chuck) Farrell, a striker and picket, with a wild, frightened shot out the right window of his car as he was being mobbed from the left side and front. Farrell was trying to climb in the right door. He shot him through the head with a .45 automatic. When he fired, ten or a dozen policemen within 100 feet were doing nothing to protect him.

Frank W. Edwards, of Waterloo, defending Roberts, proved that he was abandoned by the government and the C. I. O. mob and argued that a law-abiding citizen as attacked and so abandoned has a right to use reasonable means to defend himself and his property.

The charges were manslaughter and the jury took 3 1/2 hours to acquit.

The other defendant was Oscar Perry, charged with murder in defending himself from a mob of pickets at the Armour and Company plant at National City Ill. By a change of venue his trial was held in Waterloo, Iowa, after a little more than one hour of deliberation the jury exonerated Perry who shot Jim Hucks during a lynch-fury by a mob of C. I. O. goons at night. Hucks and three other pickets chased Perry and who tried to climb a fence to get away. Someone grabbed his leg and shot in the dark. Two other pickets who were in the mob with Hucks chasing Perry and others, testified for the state.

Rookie Is Determined to Make Team

New York, Feb. 22 — (UP)—Rookie Cal Abrams dove into the fight for a Big Dayn outfield job today with the blarney assertion that he'll be on the starting team for 1949.

Abrams, signing his contract with the Dodgers, showed little concern with the opposition he faces to make the team. Names like Mike McCormick, Gene Hornanski, Duke Snider, Marvin Rakley, Carl Furillo didn't faze him.

But there was more than bragadocio to the 24-year-old Brooklynite's confident prediction. He has a four-year batting average of .338. Including is a .337 with Mobile, Ala., of the Southern Association last season.

Leo Durand wanted to keep him on the Dodger roster in 1949, but Deacon Branch Rickey overruled his pilot, feeling that the lad needed another year of minor league ball.

Now he had that year, and is ready to shoot for the big time. The fact that he's a left handed hitter makes his job a little tougher, because the Dodgers are long on righties.
